

Learning from Living with Dementia

Train the Trainer course

The award-winning course, 'Learning from Living with Dementia', from DementiaTrainers and EDUCATE, is a dementia awareness training day with a big difference. Not only was it co-produced with people living with dementia, but all the key learning points on this course are taught, via embedded video clips, by people who have dementia. In choosing 'Learning from Living with Dementia' as the Best Dementia Training Initiative 2019, the National Dementia Care Awards judges described the course as 'innovative, thoughtful and inspiring'. They said it demonstrates 'that the best people to train and raise awareness in healthcare professionals about dementia are those living with it'.

Learning from Living with Dementia is suitable training for anyone who works in a social care or health setting. It addresses all of the Dementia Awareness learning outcomes of the Dementia Training Standards Framework (Skills for Health, Skills for Care and NHS Health Education England) and much more. It inspires staff to think of practical strategies to support the people with dementia for whom they care.

The two-day Learning from Living with Dementia Train the Trainer course is appropriate for anyone who wishes to deliver dementia awareness training, from experienced care staff through to professional trainers. No prior experience of delivering training is necessary; the Train the Trainer course will both familiarise participants with the Learning from Living with Dementia course and equip them with the skills and confidence necessary to lead the course themselves. Each participant on the Learning from Living with Dementia Train the Trainer course will come away with all the resources necessary to deliver the course, including the slideshow with embedded video clips, handouts, activities and two versions of the trainer's guidelines – one for delivering the course face to face, and one for delivering the course over Zoom.

The Learning from Living with Dementia Train the Trainer course is available to be commissioned to run in-house for groups of up to 12 participants and is also delivered as an open course led by Buz Loveday, the Director and Lead Trainer of DementiaTrainers. Open courses are running over Zoom on the following dates:
